Thursday, April 19, 2018

With the stock market at all-time highs, many investors look to other avenues to diversify their portfolios. One of the major ways to do that is through real estate. Doctors are no different in looking to real estate as a way to put their money to work in the smartest way possible. However, doctors are a unique class of investor, for a couple reasons.

First of all, they work a ridiculous number of hours for a high salary. So it just doesn't make sense for a doctor to follow active real estate strategies like "flipping" houses or strange strategies like turning containers into short-term rentals. While these things might make sense for someone working in real estate full time, most doctors will tend to favor more passive options.
